WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 11.

Rosewood.—It has puzzled many to decide why the dark wood so highly valued for furniture should be called rosewood. Its color certainly does not look like that of a rose, but when the tree is first cut the fresh wood possesses a strong rose-like fragrance; hence the name. There are half a dozen or more kinds of rosewood trees found in South America and in the East Indies, and neighboring islands. Some of the trees grow so large that planks four feet broad and ten feet in length can be cut from them. These broad planks are principally used to make tops for pianos. When grown in the rosewood is remarkable for its beauty, but such is its value in manufacture that it once grew abundantly, now have scarcely a single specimen. In Madras the Government has prudently had great plantations of this tree set out in order to keep up the supply.
